REASONS FOR DISSENTING

SUPREME COURT MINORITY WANTS TO BE UNDERSTOOD.

Stand Taken in the Mortgage Deduction Law Case-High Court Decisions.

The dissenting opinion of the minority of the Supreme Court in the mortgage deduction case was handed down yesterday. It was written by Judge Dowling and concurred in by Judge Monks. They give their reasons for dissenting and insist that the mortgage deduction law is unconstitutional

First-It violates the rule that no privieges nor immunities shall be granted to any citizen or class of citizens, which, upon the same terms shall not equally belong to Second-It is such a special law for the assessment of taxes as is expressly forbidden by the Constitution. Third-It violates the rule of the Constiution requiring uniformity and equality in the rate of assessment and taxation. Fourth-It excepts from taxation real estate not held for municipal, educational, literary, scientific, religious or charitable

Judge Dowling calls attention to the fact that the Governor refused to sign the law on account of doubts as to its validity, and diamonds, and then it is more private and that it is "sporadic in its character," and not a part of any comprehensive law for general taxation. He insists that if the statute is to stand the Constitution must give way. By way of illustration he says: "Under the act before the court a lot or tract of land may be assessed at the rate of $1,400, while another lot or tract in the same taxing district and of the same value may be assessed for taxation at the rate of $700. The pretext for this violation of the rule of uniformity is that the first lot is subject to the lien of a mortgage to the amount of $700 or more, while the second is unincumbered
